

The Stanley Wiater Modern Horror Archive

Overview

The Stanley Wiater archive of Modern Horror literature is likely the most comprehensive collection of materials documenting the field in existence. Mr. Wiater has been a writer, editor, anthologist, journalist, and collector in the field for over 40 years. He is a three-time winner of the Bram Stoker Award, given by the Horror Writers Association, and has become, over the years, a friend to virtually all of the writers and many of the filmmakers in the field. The Wiater archive is unique in that it has been assembled by an individual who is himself a contributor to the field and has spent decades making its writers and writings accessible to others, both within the field and outside of it. Mr. Wiater is widely considered the leading authority in the world on major horror writers and filmmakers.

Modern Horror emerged as a field unto itself in the late 1960s-early 1970s, after previously being subsumed under the "fantasy and science fiction" umbrella. The leading writers in the field at that time — Ray Bradbury, Fritz Leiber, and others — were already well-known as fantasy or science fiction writers. In the 1970s, after the success of such mainstream movies as Rosemary's Baby and The Exorcist, and with the sudden and unprecedented success of the horror novels of Stephen King — reportedly the bestselling novelist in the world — the field came into its own. Mr. Wiater began his book collection in the 1960s, and his first job as a journalist was interviewing Ray Bradbury. Bradbury's first book was originally published by Arkham House, the horror specialty publisher named after H.P. Lovecraft's fictional New England town, and his stories and novels, such as Something Wicked This Way Comes, helped lay the foundation for future generations of writers. Mr. Wiater's interview with Bradbury took place at his home in 1974, and thus his archive documents the field essentially from its inception.

The archive is multifaceted, consisting of a large number of manuscripts — both Mr. Wiater's own and those of the writers he anthologized or edited; a substantial amount of correspondence from virtually all of the major writers in the field; an extensive collection of multimedia material — audio and video tapes of Mr. Wiater's interviews of the leading figures in the field; and a large number of photographs of the authors and filmmakers and artists.

Among the manuscripts are the working files for Mr. Wiater's three Stoker Award-winning books: Dark Dreamers: Conversations with the Masters of Horror, Dark Thoughts: On Writing, and the collection Dark Dreamers: Facing the Masters of Fear. These books include interviews with, profiles of, and commentaries by such writers as Stephen King, Clive Barker, Dean Koontz, Anne Rice, Ray Bradbury, Richard Matheson, Peter Straub, and many others. There are also manuscript files for the other books Mr. Wiater has edited, including two anthologies of original fiction by nearly two dozen writers, and books on Stephen King, Brian Lumley, and Richard Matheson's classic Twilight Zone scripts, which established that show as the gold standard of serious, thought-provoking television in the early years of the medium. In addition, the manuscripts of Mr. Wiater's own fiction are included, both published and unpublished. His first published story, "The Toucher," won a contest that was judged by Stephen King. The audio and video tapes are a unique element of the archive: since 1974 Mr. Wiater has interviewed more writers in the field than anyone else, and the unedited tapes and transcripts of the interviews are an unparalleled resource for students of the field, as the published versions of them represent only a fraction of the overall interview content. There are hundreds of audio and video tapes in the archive. Interviewees include virtually every well-known writer in the field and many lesser known ones. It is doubtful there exists anywhere a repository of such unpublished and unseen material as this, or an archive that documents this important genre of popular literature as thoroughly and sympathetically as does Mr. Wiater's archive.

Noteworthy Items

Audio and Video Tapes of Wiater's Interviews of Leading Figures in the Field of Modern Horror

- Unedited tapes: a unique resource contrasting those published versions which represent only a fraction of the interview material
- More than 100 hours of audio interview content with leading figures such as Bradbury, King, Barker, Matheson, Robert Bloch, Harlan Ellison, Ira Levin, David Morrell, Roger Corman, David Cronenberg, George Romero, Sidney Pollack, Martin Scorsese, Laymon, Lansdale, Kevin Eastman, Joseph Citro, John Farris, Peter Laird, Lumley, Anne Rice, John Saul, and many others. (complete list attached)
- More than 36 video tapes, each of which is 2 hrs. long. Most of this video content has never been seen; when the shows were produced, the 2 hour interview tapes were edited down to 24 minutes long. Interviewees include: Barker, Ellison, Matheson, Romero, Straub, Gahan Wilson, Wes Craven, Douglas Clegg, Charles De Lint, Jack Ketchum, Nancy Kilpatrick, Richard Laymon, RCM, John Skipp, Craig Spector, Edo Van Belkom, and many others.
